

Evaluation GEEK CLUB

Connection, sharing and learning for artists,
educators and evaluators

Evaluation is an integral part of community arts and arts education. It is how we understand our practice in a meaningful way to be able to build and learn with our communities and peers. Evaluation is still however often funder focused, prioritising 'proving' over 'learning', and does not put the people who deliver and experience the activities at the forefront.

We hope that the Evaluation Geek Club will support colleagues from across the arts, community, and education sectors to come together and de-mystify evaluation methods and tools, share generously, and learn together.

What is Geek Club?

An online club and resource for artists and educators who want to approach evaluation with purpose, creativity and care.

The initial proposal includes a:

- bi-monthly online meet up
- padlet to share resources, tools, training opportunities, events
- the option to join a WhatsApp group for quick requests

Who is it for?

The Geek Club is for anyone who is interested in evaluation and learning in the arts and education world. You certainly do not need to be an experienced evaluator to join the club. We hope this will grow from a small group of people who are involved in evaluation to a lively community of practice including people with a whole range of experiences and skills. The club aims to be open, responsive, very friendly and very down to earth.

The invitation...

An invite to you or any colleagues to join an initial online meeting where Vicky from Chol Theatre will start the ball rolling by sharing one of Chol's current reflective practice approaches they use with teachers and artists in their partner schools. Vicky's input will be brief and there will be time to talk, question and share thoughts on what the Geek Club could be going forwards.
